CALL TO DUTY
BOOTS ON THE GROUND™

Intent

*To emphasize the importance of the Army Values for all Soldiers and
Department of the Army Civilians*

Background

In 2005, the Army began a campaign to reemphasize the importance of the Army Values throughout the force. That mission continues today with the revised Army Values posters, which provide a visible reminder of embodiment of the warrior spirit and the importance of our core values.

Army Values - Our Core

Since September 11, 2001, the world has witnessed the very best of our Soldiers, Army Civilians, and their Family members, as evidenced by their dedication to duty, professionalism, and compassion as they have lived the Army Values.

Many of our Army Family have made the ultimate sacrifice by giving their lives honorably in the Global War on Terrorism. Others have provided aid during times of need resulting from natural disasters or emergencies, at home and abroad. These honorable deeds epitomize the Army Values and earn the respect of people around the world.

Our Values

Actions counter to the Army Values weaken the Army team, our morale, and our readiness. They discredit our service to the Nation, and can lead those we serve to question our values. We must never accept actions inconsistent with the Army Values.

MG Harrison Command Philosophy

Enjoy being a member of "The Team". Teamwork embodies loyalty to country, subordinates, peers, & superiors- practice this in all that you do. The essence of my command philosophy is People, Mission, & Readiness. There are five basic components:

1. Do what is right...legally, ethically, and morally
2. Practice the "Golden Rule"
3. Spiritual, physical, & mental fitness is a must
4. Train your replacement; develop tomorrow's leaders
5. Ensure your Family is Army strong and prepared
